

Grain

“Action to counter degradation, especially within this decade, is essential for the future of our children and our children’s children. Time is very short.”

—ELCA Social Statement on Caring for God’s Creation: Vision, Hope, and Justice

Field

<sup>20</sup> “I ask not only on behalf of these, but also on behalf of those who will believe in me through their word, <sup>21</sup> that they may all be one. As you, Father, are in me and I am in you, may they also be in us,<sup>[a]</sup> so that the world may believe that you have sent me. <sup>22</sup> The glory that you have given me I have given them, so that they may be one, as we are one, <sup>23</sup> I in them and you in me, that they may become completely one, so that the world may know that you have sent me and have loved them even as you have loved me. <sup>24</sup> Father, I desire that those also, whom you have given me, may be with me where I am, to see my glory, which you have given me because you loved me before the foundation of the world.” John 17:20-24

Thoughts

Jesus didn’t simply pray for those who were immediately surrounding him or even only for people living during his time, but also for future generations. That means we were part of Jesus’ prayers 2,000 years ago. The disciples overheard Jesus and transmitted his words through history to people who would come after them and will follow us. Future lives matter. I feel a need to claim that, not because current lives don’t matter, but future lives seem marginalized in a present in which we too easily say climate change seems abstract or the problem just doesn’t feel urgent.

Today, we have enough technology to seriously address climate change caused by humans. There is a lot of good news about what’s working and how some municipalities are moving us forward, and yet substantial efforts are getting lost in federal and state partisan politics. In reaction, increasing numbers of youth are rising up alarmed by our oceans filled with plastic, polluted drinking water, climate change that will impact many already walking on this planet. The crisis feels real to many young people because it is. However, the burden of the crisis should not fall on any one generation. Jesus calls us to be united across age groups and through time.

As we experience the urgency of learning about our political candidates and voting and as we hold our elected officials accountable to caring for God’s creation, what if we sometimes also included future generations in our prayers. Dear God, we pray for your children who will come after us. Give them the grace to know your love, an earth that sustains them and all future creatures, clean water, beautiful landscapes, enough food from the land and just policies that ensure everyone gets to eat. For what else do we pray for the future children of God?

On this Memorial Day, we also remember those who sacrificed themselves in military service and imagined safe lives for citizens in their present and in the future. Happy Monday!

Share

Send any quotes you'd like to share with our network to cindyc@loppw.org

All Monday Quotes found under the Resources & Advocacy Tools tab at www.loppw.org

Many Blessings upon you,

Pastor Cindy